Taiwan urges restraint on Spratlys issue

By T. H. Hsu

Taiwan's foreign ministry has urged the United States to exercise restraint in the South China Sea, saying that the issue is not a matter of core national interest.

The ministry's statement came in response to a report that the United States had decided to send a naval task force to the South China Sea in 2001.

The ministry said that the United States should not use military force to resolve the dispute over the Spratly Islands, which are claimed by both Taiwan and China.

Limbo-trapped cars

The Philippine government's decision to impose a 100 percent tariff on used cars imported from the United States is a move that will only hurt the country's economy. The move is a clear attempt to protect the local car industry, but it is a self-defeating strategy. The United States is a major market for Philippine exports, and any move to restrict trade with the United States will have a negative impact on the Philippine economy. The government should instead focus on improving the quality of its products and services to compete in the global market.

Power rate hike viewed positively, say analysts

THE ENERGY Regulatory Commission's 10-cent-per-kilowatt-hour (KWH) increase in the provisional surcharge (PS) to adjust its rates by an average of 98 cent/kilowatt-hour is viewed positively by analysts in the stock market.

The 90-company Philippine Stock Exchange (PSE) Index (PSEI) hit 7,392.95 last Thursday, up from 7,302.95 its highest since its launch 40 months when it finished at 7,445.57 same time in April 2000.

"It is no accident that the recent strength of the Philippine stock market follows closely on the heels of the decision of the ERC to allow Napoco to raise its rates," said Jim Piam, head of Debt Capital Markets for Asia Pacific of Credit Suisse First Boston.

Piam also said the ERC decision had a strong positive influence on the foreign investment held back by the Philippine government.

Switzerland-based UBS Investment Bank said, for its part, it is pleased that the market has reacted favorably to the PSE's rate adjustment, noting that the ERC decision was a step in the right direction.

UBS analysts say PSEI has risen 6.3 per cent since the decision.

the 1990s, the use of the term "diversity" has become a popular corporate buzzword. The term is used to describe a wide range of differences among people, including differences in race, ethnicity, gender, age, sexual orientation, and physical ability. While the concept of diversity has gained widespread acceptance, its meaning and implications are still being debated. Some argue that diversity is simply a matter of representation, while others see it as a more complex issue involving power, privilege, and social justice. This paper explores the various ways in which the concept of diversity has been used and interpreted in the workplace, and discusses the challenges and opportunities that arise from its implementation.

These results suggest that, while the use of a decision instrument is necessary to ensure that the most appropriate and relevant information is used in the decision-making process, it is not sufficient to ensure that the decision is made in a rational and unbiased manner. The results also suggest that the use of a decision instrument can be used to identify the most appropriate and relevant information, but it is not sufficient to ensure that the decision is made in a rational and unbiased manner.

Y. was still involved, by way of his group, in the 'reconstruction' of the village of Wapiti, in the Northwest Territories, Canada. He wanted to bring his own ideas and eventually a small community to life in the village.

The Department announced special criteria for that funding: more money had to be raised by the community, and the money had to be from a local source. More than half and being given the money conditions: first, before the cash had all been raised, and it was a local source. The money had to be raised by the community, and the money had to be from a local source. The money had to be raised by the community, and the money had to be from a local source.

Transmembrane proteins have a hydrophobic transmembrane  $\alpha$  helix embedded in the membrane, with the N- and C-termini, and also protein side chains, extending into the aqueous phase on either side of the lipid bilayer. The  $\alpha$ -helix is often covered by a hydrophilic glycoprotein coat, which anchors the protein.

When the company learns the full story, says a consultant from Boston, Mass., "It's difficult to know the company's true needs and a solution to its problems." The company must tell its customer what it is doing, and the customer must tell the company what it is doing. Both are working with the same information.

Staphylococcus aureus develops a resistance to penicillins by producing an enzyme called penicillinase, which destroys the penicillin molecule. The penicillinase is released by the bacteria through secretory vesicles. Some strains of staphylococci also produce a "cell wall" that is impermeable to penicillin.
